

SMALL POX SCARE OVER

Students Ordered to be Vaccinated or Leave School.

On Tuesday of last week, notices were posted to the effect that all persons connected with the college must either be vaccinated or leave the school by Friday, Nov. 15th. This order was issued on account of the outbreak of several small pox cases in various parts of the campus, making it appear as though there might be a general outbreak of small pox over the entire college. Consequently on Wednesday morning there was a rush of students to the hospital to be vaccinated. In the last several days, however, there have been no new cases and the force of the alarm is about spent. A later order has extended the limit of the time, before which all students must be vaccinated, to Monday, Nov. 18. Many serious objections were raised to this order by persons who have a fear of vaccination. These persons must realize, however, that the force of a contagious outbreak of this kind can never be told and a few, or for that matter, a few hundred sore arms are to be preferred to a few hundred small pox cases. The physicians seem to have the disin hand and there is little danger of any further outbreaks.
